The Party attempted to parley briefly with the werewolves, but they weren't biting. With a handy casting of Magic Weapon from Weylan, the Party forced the werewolves back into the cave under the withering fire of Calla's longbow. Once inside the cave, the Party drew the attention of many more werewolves from deeper inside the caverns but had no trouble dispatching them – especially with help from a well-timed fireball from Patrin that crisped all the wolves at once.

Unfortunately, during the battle a werewolf managed to get his jaws around Patrin with a solid chomp, and Patrin promptly was infected with lycanthropy and transformed into a dragonborn/wolf hybrid – effectively the same form the werewolves the Party was facing were in.

After the battle, Calla used her magic to increase the Party's stealth, and she and Cinnamon began sneaking further into the cave system to see what else lies in wait for the Party.
